Donne's "Air and Angels" resurrects the ashes of sensuous love, real love as experienced by flesh-and-bone mortals from the ruins of Plato's abstract and physically transcendent that was even espoused by the NeoPlatonists.

Air and Angel Summary and Analysis by John Donne

John Donne's poem "Air and Angels" focuses on the medieval beliefs respecting angels. Angels are commonly seen as messengers of God or appear as a conventional representation of a human form with wings. A popular theory in medieval times assumed angels under certain circumstances did assume bodies of air.
